Cork

Cork has a small city atmosphere, but being the second largest city in Ireland, it has the sophistication of a modern urban center. It's an easy city to move around in with a mix of extensive boulevards and small alleys with hidden cafes and cozy pubs. Cork offers great value with cheaper public transport and food. The city has a great cultural scene with live music, festivals and events and with its friendly atmosphere it is consistently ranked among the friendliest cities in the world.

Galway

On the beautiful west coast of Ireland, Galway is one of the must-see cities in the world to visit. Galway has an arty bohemian atmosphere, offering bright pubs and a lively music scene. While it is steeped in history the city buzzes with a contemporary vibe. With only 70,000 inhabitants, the vibrant University City attracts an infinity of visitors through the year, who come to see the historical centre and the beautiful coastal paths, not to mention the festivals and unforgettable nightlife.

Dublin

With more than 1 million inhabitants, the capital has all the benefits of a metropolis, with a rich history and heritage, with its many monuments, galleries and museums, and a vibrant, diverse and dynamic cultural scene. Dublin is one of the world's most popular tourist destinations and has one of the youngest populations in Europe – ideal for students wanting to improve their language in a friendly and young atmosphere.
